“Making the American Dream Real for Everyone” focuses on the rise and fall of unions and our allies over the past 125 years in the fight to share fairly in the wealth we produce building a more just and equitable country, and how we can rebuild our union power.

Mark McDermott has spent his lifetime working for economic, social and racial justice. As an economic justice and labor educator, he has given over 293 speeches and workshops in 18 states over the past 5+ years to affiliates of 24 international unions and many progressive community-based organizations. Mark’s deep commitment to reaching working people across all diversity comes from his own family experiences from being a child of the early 1960’s and having a parent lose his steady job of 40 years to his own personal experience as an adult casualty of the class warfare of the Reagan era.
